

February 25, 2010 By Denny Ray Hardin

My last words to Government.

When we can no longer depend upon you to protect our rights, privileges and immunities. When we can no longer depend upon you to administer justice in an unbiased and unprejudicial manner. When we can no longer trust your words and your interpretations of our law. When you no longer administer justice, but inflict harm upon the people. When we can no longer petition for redress of grievances. When we can no longer trust judges to protect us from those who do us harm. When we can no longer depend on the judicial system to provide us equal opportunity under the law. When we can no longer charge criminal who have harmed us because they wear black robes or are [BAR] members. When we can no longer read and understand our rights under the law. When it becomes a crime to stop those who act without authority of law. When we are forced to follow decisions we know to be unjust. When we are denied justice to protect corruption. When we are made slaves to our public servants. When we are no longer free to speak out against injustice. Are we Americans? Are we the descendants of the brave and free men/women who founded this Nation? Are you proud of what we have become? I say enough is enough. I oppose this government and all it stands for. I am American and there are no honorable people in government worthy of my words.

Denny Ray Hardin